EXTEND INTELLIGENCE / PAID PILOT OFFER

A first Enactment for your organization

Bring us one thing your best expert regularly has to show someone. We'll build a guided experience around that moment and test it with the people who need it.

The starting point

Choose one audience, one recurring task and one approved source. A patient education team might choose a question about a follow-up visit in a synthetic plan. A publisher might choose a chapter that readers often struggle to put into practice.

What you bring

A sponsor who owns the task, an expert who can explain how it is done, material you may use for the pilot, and participants who can try a fresh example. Identify any wording that must remain exact and the questions that should go back to a person.

What XI delivers

We map the interaction with your expert, stage one working Enactment, and give your reviewer a private version to try. During the review, the participant can ask a question and see the material or control that helps them act. We revise it against the agreed scope and document the result of the participant test.

How we decide whether it worked

Before production, choose one observable outcome and a point of comparison. Could a participant locate the right instruction, build a scorecard that reflects their priorities, or explain a creative choice on a fresh example? Your reviewer checks the expert's method and the source material. Together we review the evidence and decide whether to extend the work.

Commercial terms

After the initial conversation, XI provides a written scope, fee, schedule and acceptance criteria for approval. The pilot covers the agreed task, review and test. Any wider rollout receives its own proposal.
